Subject: Amendment to the FY2020 Unified Planning Work Program – Element 2.37: Sustainable Funding Options for the Urban Waters Ambassador Program

Date: September 13, 2019

The Urban Waters Federal Partnership (UWFP) program was formed in 2010 to reconnect urban communities to their waterways by improving coordination among federal agencies and collaborating with local revitalization efforts. Fourteen federal agencies and 19 urban areas nationwide currently participate in the program. The Meramec/Big River watershed is one of the 19 designated urban waters.

This project includes a review of the UWFP program for the Meramec/Big River, engagement of UWFP partners and an investigation of sustainable funding options that would continue the efforts of the UWFP Ambassador to coordinate among agencies and organizations (federal, state and local) in an effort to reach the UWFP’s vision of revitalized urban waters and the communities that surround them.

We anticipate the work will begin in October and be completed by May 2021. The funding available for this project is $36,355.00 through a grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency through Wichita State University. The updated UPWP element describing the work tasks is attached.

Staff Recommendations: Staff recommends that the FY2020 Unified Planning Work Program be amended to add work element 2.37: Sustainable Funding Options for the Urban Waters Ambassador Program as attached. Staff further recommends that the Executive Director be authorized to enter into a subaward agreement with Wichita State University to conduct the necessary work.

DISCUSSION ITEMS

STL.works

Kathy Osborn, Regional Business Council (RBC), provided background on the RBC’s activities in workforce development. She noted that during the last two years RBC has been involved in an initiative called STL.works. The initiative is a partnership/collaboration research effort focusing on creating a broad consortium, rebranding skilled careers, connecting talent to training, and investing in programs connecting smart jobs and bright futures for builders/doers/problem solvers in our communities. Ms. Osborn pointed out the following challenges the region is facing: urgent need for skilled workers, no centralized source of information, and a lack of marketing strategy. She highlighted four industry areas of concern in the community that STL.work will work towards filling job gaps: Healthcare, Manufacturing, Trades, and Technology. She commended Jim Wild and his collaborative efforts in this initiative. She noted the goal of RBC is to ensure that all High School students have a broad understanding of all available career paths and training before they graduate High School.

Ms. Osborn introduced Alaina Macia, CEO of MTM, to brief the committee of how this initiative can provide training programs, and increase job prospects in the community to fill various industry job gaps. Ms. Osborn then introduced Brian Hall, Chief Marketing Officer with Explore St. Louis, to brief the committee on various marketing strategies of STL.works that will address many of the community workforce challenges. He pointed out that many of the strategies include social media campaigns, sponsors and stakeholders, as well as celebrity and employer contribution solicitations. Lastly, Ms. Osborn introduced Scott J. Wilson, CEO of S.M. Wilson & Co., to brief the committee on the next steps of the initiative including marketing campaigns, expanding workforce collaborations, developing recruiter networks, train recruiters, and presentations and investments.
Chairman Kern asked what East-West Gateway can do to support this initiative. Ms. Osborn asked that people spread the word. Mr. Ehlmann inquired about support from Governor Parson’s office. Ms. Osborn answered that she has found the State of Missouri to be very receptive of this initiative, and she encourages workforce development boards to work together to make the industry work better in the community.

All Hazard Mitigation Plan

Jennifer Vuitel, EWGCOG, gave a brief recap of the draft plan presented to the board in January. She reminded the committee that the Plan is in response to an October 2018 agreement between EWGCOG and the Missouri State Emergency Management Agency (SEMA) to update the St. Louis Regional Hazard Mitigation Plan for the Missouri portion of the region. The Plan primarily provides information regarding natural disasters, levels of risk, and strategies for local governments and school districts to reduce the adverse effects of natural hazards. She also pointed out that grant funding eligibility is available to counties, cities, and school districts that adopt the Plan. Ms. Vuitel noted that the draft plan has been completed and is now available for review on the EWGCOG website; the final draft will be submitted to SEMA no later than January 1, 2020. She stressed that staff requests that all interested and involved jurisdictions adopt the Plan by resolution, and reiterated that only jurisdictions that have adopted the Plan are eligible for funding primarily through FEMA’s Hazard Mitigation grant programs.

Where We Stand 8th Edition Update #2: Homicide Rates

Jim Wild, EWGCOG, noted that as a result of recent discussions surrounding crime and gun violence, he thought it would be appropriate to continue the conversation presenting the Where We Stand update on homicide data/statistics. John Posey, EWGCOG, then began his presentation by highlighting data comparing St. Louis to its peer metro regions. He noted that the two data sources used were from the FBI Crime Reporting program mentioning not all 50 states provide data to this source therefore data is provided for only 46 states; the other data source used is from the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) for all 50 states. He then discussed in detail the graphs and tables presented that rank and compare homicide rates for St. Louis nationally as well as county level data on murders by race, age, firearms, and non-firearms. He also noted that the FBI data source was used for the Missouri counties, and the CDC data source was used for the Illinois counties. Mr. Posey also noted that the data points to a strong connection between homicide and poverty, reflecting higher rates of murder being committed in higher poverty areas.

Lastly, Mr. Posey highlighted graphs comparing trends for similar homicide increases in central cities pointing out that the rising murder rates in Midwestern industrial cities is not inevitable. He mentioned that the reports cites successes in the region, barriers and challenges, as well as recommendations and suggestions from the Department of Justice in response for technical assistance from the City of St. Louis. Some of the successes highlighted include the Violence Prevention Commission (VPC) collaboration of more than 100 agencies working towards a coordinated approach at violence prevention, as well as the City of St. Louis Police Department for building/fostering collaborations and relationships, and a new hospital based collaboration developed by the United Way. Among the barriers/challenges highlighted include concentrated poverty, strong racial/economic segregation, as well as low levels of trust in police in high crime neighborhoods. Recommendations from the Department of Justice offered several models including the Cure Violence Program embraced by the City of St. Louis recently, and recommended continued support for the VPC.

After Mr. Posey’s briefing, there was considerable discussion and questions regarding the data and various issues relating to the poverty correlation of higher rates of homicides in rural areas, regional problem versus metropolitan problem, conceal and carry, family unit/poverty impact, as well as the percentage of crimes made by convicted felons versus non-felons. Mr. Posey thanked the board for their questions and comments and will research further to provide answers to questions raised. The board thanked him for providing the information. Mr. Page noted that this is the number one problem in the area requiring everyone’s support working together at addressing this problem. Mr. Wild noted this conversation, relating not only to homicide but crime as a whole, will continue and is proposing to have Mr. Posey work with experts gathering more data to bring back more information relating to how the region can better work together. He encouraged questions from the board relating to crime for our Research team to further research and share.
